Dear Mr. Kizer,

Thank you for your letter of November 9, 2004. Due to Veterans Day, I did not receive it until November 12. I am anxious to resolve this matter as quickly as possible.

I very much appreciate written communication in these matters. It is obviously necessary for matters that may need to be resolved by a court.

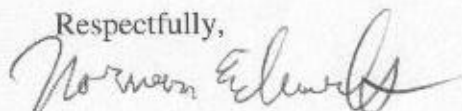

However, I would like to save the expense of certified mail with each communication. We can easily do this if each of us, when we receive a communication, will to the following:

1. copy each communication we receive from the other
2. write on it the date received
3. sign it
4. send the signed copy to the other

This not only establishes that a communication was sent, and when it was sent, but it also established exactly what as sent. If one of us does not respond as stated above within a few days, the other still has the option to resend the communication as a certified letter.

In regard to your request, I do not recall signing a "contract" or "purchase agreement" with you. Please send me a copy of the document to which you are referring and I will promptly reply.

Thank you very much.

Respectfully,

Norman Edwards
